Welcome

Soldiers and their families assigned here enjoy breathtaking scenery; abundant hunting, fishing and camping; regal mountains; diverse wildlife; and the friendly, independent people who are our neighbors.

U.S. Army Alaska and U.S. Army garrisons Fort Richardson and Fort Wainwright are at the cutting edge of Army transformation and the Global War on Terrorism. Successful combat tours by the 1st Stryker Brigade Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division, and 4th Brigade Combat Team (Airborne), 25th Infantry Division, mark the Army's continued commitment to stopping terrorism and defending freedom. The stationing of Aviation Task Force 49 at Fort Wainwright has expanded our capabilities and both forts Richardson and Wainwright are expected to continue growing over the next five years.

Our commitment to families is unprecedented with new housing being built all over Fort Wainwright, Fort Richardson and Fort Greely and family services to assist families of deployed Soldiers are at an all-time high level.

The 49th state owes much of its success, infrastructure, roads and accessibility to the Army. Soldiers were here from the moment Alaska was transferred from Russia to the United States, Oct. 18, 1867.

Now, 140 years later, U.S. Army Alaska is the Army's forward presence for the Northern and Pacific region defense. Our mission is to deploy combat ready forces to support joint military operations worldwide and serve as the Joint Forces Land Component Command to support Joint Task Force Alaska.

Our strategic location, superior training capabilities and dynamic relationship with our local civilian communities make Alaska a significant national asset and world-class power projection platform for military operations anywhere in the world. Extensive training areas throughout this beautiful state provide critical backdrops for molding the tough, well-trained Soldiers essential for these new forces.

We execute our mission focusing on taking care of Soldiers, families and communities, fighting the Global War on Terrorism, pursuing joint initiatives, responding to theater contingency operations around the Pacific, and expanding our strategic reach to missions spanning the entire globe.

Soldiers and Families: Our Soldier, spouse and family programs are second to none. Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers, Army Community Service, medical care, Child, Youth and School Services and our outstanding recreational programs rank with the best anywhere in the Army.

GWOT: We train hard in Alaska to deploy and fight around the world. Many of our units have deployed, or are preparing to deploy, in support of the Global War on Terrorism.

Joint Initiatives: USARAK will continue to build its relationship with our joint military counterparts through joint training exercises and information sharing.

Theater Response(s): Our units are well-prepared to deploy anywhere in the Pacific Theater for contingencies ranging from humanitarian relief to combat operations.

Strategic Reach: Alaska's central position at 'the Top of the World' permits faster response time and lethality around the globe. You are joining a team of Soldiers, family members and civilians whose tremendous heart is matched only by the size of this wondrous state.

USARAK is headquartered at Fort Richardson, U.S Army garrisons Fort Richardson and Fort Wainwright encompass two posts with a total of 1.65 million acres. Nearly 12,000 Soldiers and 2,500 civilian employees keep the mission going forward.

USARAK headquarters transitioned to an Early Entry Command Post, or EECP, in 2007 and is responsible for establishing initial command and control of forces in a combat theater and setting the conditions for its parent Operational Command Post, headquartered at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, to assume command and control.

USARAK is home to the 1st Stryker Brigade Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division, as well as the 4th Brigade Combat Team (Airborne), 25th Infantry Division, and Aviation Task Force 49.

The 1-25th SBCT deployed to Iraq as the 172nd Stryker Brigade in August 2005 for a yearlong deployment that was extended to 16 months. On returning to Alaska, the unit was re-designated the 1st Stryker Brigade Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division.

The 1st SBCT, 25th ID, is stationed at Fort Wainwright. Its subordinate units are the 3rd Battalion, 21st Infantry Regiment; 1st Battalion, 5th Infantry Regiment, 1st Battalion, 24th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Battalion, 8th Field Artillery Regiment, 5th Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment; 25th Brigade Troops Battalion and the 25th Brigade Support Battalion, as well as smaller units and separate companies.

Aviation Task Force 49's major units are the 1-52nd General Aviation Support Battalion, and the 6th Squadron, 17th Cavalry Regiment.

Fort Richardson is home to the 4th Brigade Combat Team (Airborne), 25th Infantry Division. The post is also headquarters for the 59th Signal Battalion, the Regional Contracting Office Alaska, and the Alaska Department of Military and Veterans Affairs. The Pacific Civilian Personnel Operations Center, a state-operated fish hatchery and the Fort Richardson National Cemetery are also located on Fort Richardson.

Separate U.S. Army Alaska units at Fort Wainwright include the Northern Warfare Training Center. Headquartered at Fort Wainwright, but serving both posts, are the Defense Military Pay Office and Military Personnel Divisions and C Detachment, 125th Finance Battalion.

U.S. Army Garrison, host to these tactical units, has headquarters at Fort Richardson and Fort Wainwright.

Tenant organizations at forts Richardson and Wainwright also include Medical Activity Department-Alaska, U. S. Army Alaska Veterinary District Command and Dental Activity-Alaska.

Fort Wainwright is also home to the Cold Regions Research and Engineering Laboratory.

The Department of Defense Missile Defense Agency is a tenant at Fort Greely, which provides support for the Ground-Based Midcourse Defense's Operation Support Group-Alaska and the 49th Missile Defense Battalion.

HISTORY

of the U.S. Army in Alaska

William (Billy) Mitchell.

When Alaska became the 49th state in 1959, the Army was there. Only the indigenous peoples of Alaska have been here longer. Today, the Army thrives here: training in unforgiving arctic conditions, actively participating in community affairs and providing assistance in natural disasters.

The U.S. Army's long and important history in the Great Land began at the very moment Alaska became American soil, Oct. 18, 1867.

Elements of the 9th Infantry were on hand as the Russian Golden Eagle was lowered and the Stars and Stripes was raised in Sitka, which became headquarters for the U.S. Military District, Alaska.

The Army has had a presence, if very small at times, ever since.

Charged with maintaining law and order in the new territory, Soldiers helped quell uprisings and built new forts at Wrangell, St. Paul Canal, Kodiak Island and on the Kenai Peninsula.

They also enforced regulations regarding the killing of fur seals, whose population had been severely depleted during the Russian reign. At Fort Wrangell and Sitka, Army wives worked with the Soldiers to establish schools and introduce Christianity to Alaska's Natives.

The Army relinquished control of Alaska to the Treasury Department in 1877, but did not entirely leave the territory.

The Signal Corps operated weather stations, and a number of officers led small geographic explorations to learn more about the territory. These expeditions into various parts of Alaska continued through the turn of the century, as mapmaking and road and bridge building expanded the frontier.

The Klondike Gold Rush in Yukon Territory, Canada, plus later gold rushes in Alaska helped that expansion, as thousands of people poured into the territory.

Although the Royal Canadian Mounted Police maintained law and order in the Yukon during the Gold Rush, the United States government, after sending Capt. Patrick Henry Ray and 1st Lt. Wilds P. Richardson to study the situation, did not deem it necessary to send the Army into Alaska as peacekeepers.

As more and more people came into Alaska and northwestern Canada, the necessity for better communications with the lower 48 states became critical. The Washington-Alaska Military Cable and Telegraph System connected all the forts in the territory with Seattle. By 1903, the line stretched from Seattle to southeastern Alaska, Valdez, the Interior and Nome. The project fell under the direction of Brig. Gen. Adolphus W. Greely. Lt. William (Billy) Mitchell, another officer who would later achieve military fame, also worked on the four-year project.

While Greely and his men struggled to complete the WAMCATS project, Richardson, on his third tour of duty in Alaska, headed the Alaska Road Commission, building garrisons and trails throughout the enormous territory.

The Army in Alaska saw a decline in activity from 1908 to 1940, with a brief surge during World War I. Work continued on building roads and bridges and improving trails during this period.

As the world prepared for another great war in 1940, military construction in Alaska accelerated. In 1940, Ladd Field, near Fairbanks, was built as a cold-weather test station, and Fort Richardson, named for Wilds P. Richardson, was built in 1940-1941 near Anchorage. Col. Simon Bolivar Buckner assumed command of the Alaska Defense Force in 1940, and while at Fort Richardson achieved the ranks of brigadier and major general.

Through the Lend-Lease Program, the United States transferred nearly 8,000 aircraft to the Soviet Union at Ladd Field, which later became Fort Wainwright. The aircraft were flown from Great Falls, Mont., to Ladd Field by American crews. Then Russian crews flew the planes to Siberia and on to the Russian front.

The pilots leaving Great Falls followed a series of small airfields that became known as the Northwest Staging Route. The airfields were located at intervals along the one-lane supply road that became the Alaska Highway.

One of those airfields, Big Delta Airfield, later became Fort Greely, providing ample acreage for Northern Warfare Training Center exercises and testing by the Cold Regions Test Center.

Following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Army engineers began building airstrips in the Aleutian Islands to fight possible Japanese invasions there. The Army Corps of Engineers joined Canadian Forces in building the Alaska Highway in less than eight months. The 1,420-mile road was built as an overland supply route to get troops and supplies to Alaska. Officials in Washington, D.C., saw Alaska as a possible starting point for the Japanese forces to invade the United States and Canada, and took measures to prevent this.

Japanese attack on Dutch Harbor, June 3, 1942. Group of Marines on the "alert" between attacks. Smoke from burning fuel tanks in background had been set afire by a dive bomber the previous day.

In fact, Alaska was the only American soil other than Hawaii to see fighting during World War II, when the Japanese forces bombed Dutch Harbor and seized Attu and Kiska islands in the Aleutian Chain.

The successful battle to retake Attu, in June 1943, was one of the bloodiest in the war. The Japanese pulled out of Kiska before the Americans stormed ashore a few months later.

At the end of the war, many of the small Army posts throughout the state closed permanently. Postwar emphasis turned to training.

The Alaskan Command was created in January 1947, the first of the unified commands under the Department of Defense. ALCOM was headquartered at Elmendorf Air Force Base, adjacent to Anchorage, and was in overall control of all military forces in Alaska.

The Alaskan Department changed its name again in 1947. The new name for the headquarters for all Army personnel in Alaska became U.S. Army, Alaska, or USARAL.

Military missions assigned to USARAL included ground and air defense of Alaska, with priority to the Anchorage and Fairbanks areas; development of cold-weather and mountain-warfare doctrines; conducting a cold-weather and mountain school at Fort Greely; providing logistical support to Air Force and Navy elements in Alaska; conducting National Guard and U.S. Army Reserve training; supervising Reserve Officer Training Corps activities; and providing for internal security, to include plans for recovery from nuclear attack.

By 1959, several Nike Hercules missile battalions were activated in the Anchorage and Fairbanks areas. The last Nike Hercules battalion was deactivated in 1979.

July 1953 saw USARAL's combat units officially reorganized into the 172nd Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) at Fort Richardson and the 171st Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) at Fort Wainwright. The two brigades were re-designated as light-infantry brigades in 1969.

USARAL was discontinued as a major subordinate command on Dec. 31, 1974, and the 172nd Infantry Brigade (Alaska), headquartered at Fort Richardson, assumed command and control, reporting to Forces Command at Fort McPherson, Ga.

The 171st Infantry Brigade was deactivated in fiscal year 1973. The 6th Infantry Division (Light), headquartered at Fort Richardson, was activated in 1986, replacing the 172nd Infantry Brigade. Division headquarters moved to Fort Wainwright in 1990. The 6th ID (L) was actively involved in training exercises in Japan and Thailand, at the Joint Readiness Training Center in Arkansas and Louisiana, and throughout Alaska until its deactivation in July 1994.

Once again the U.S. Army Alaska, this time familiarly known as USARAK, became an active headquarters at Fort Richardson. The major units under USARAK are the 1st Stryker Brigade Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division, and Aviation Task Force 49 located at Fort Wainwright and the 4th Brigade Combat Team (Airborne), 25th Infantry Division, located at Fort Richardson.

United States Army garrisons Fort Richardson and Fort Wainwright are host to USARAK and various other tenant units and organizations.

Fort Greely continues to provide valuable training and testing land, but is now primarily a support facility for the Space and Missile Defense Agency.

History of FORT RICHARDSON

Brig. Gen.
Wilds P. Richardson

Fort Richardson was named for the military pioneer explorer, Brig. Gen. Wilds P. Richardson, who served three tours of duty in the rugged Alaska territory between 1897 and 1917. Richardson, a native Texan and an 1884 West Point graduate, commanded troops along the Yukon River and supervised construction of Fort Egbert near Eagle, and Fort William H. Seward (Chilkoot Barracks) near Haines.

As head of the War Department's Alaska Road Commission during 1905-1917, he was responsible for much of the surveying and building of early railroads, roads and bridges that helped the state's settlement and growth. The Valdez-Fairbanks Trail, surveyed under his direction in 1904, was named the Richardson Highway in his honor.

Fort Richardson was built during 1940-1941 on the site of what is now Elmendorf Air Force Base. Established as the headquarters of the United States Army Alaska, in 1947, the post moved to its present location five miles north of Anchorage in 1950. The post then had barracks for 500 Soldiers, a rifle range, a few warehouses, a hospital and bachelor officer quarters.

Fort Richardson is now headquarters for United States Army Alaska, a subordinate unit of United States Army Pacific, and for United States Army Garrison Fort Richardson, which provides mission and installation support for USARAK's combat forces stationed here.

The major combat unit at Fort Richardson is the 4th Brigade Combat Team (Airborne), 25th Infantry Division. The recently activated brigade was formed around Task Force 1-501 Airborne, which deployed to Afghanistan October 2003 through July 2004.

At the time of its deployment, 1-501st was the only airborne infantry battalion in the Pacific Theater. The Soldiers of 4-25th returned from a successful tour of duty in Operation Iraqi Freedom in December 2007.

A full range of family and Soldier support facilities common to any small community are found on post, from a shoppette to childcare and recreational facilities. The post has small but modern dental and medical clinics, and receives major medical services from the 3rd Medical Group hospital at Elmendorf Air Force Base. The Joint Military Mall located between Fort Richardson and Elmendorf provides Post Exchange and commissary services.

Another major tenant organization is the Alaska National Guard, with facilities at Camp Carroll and Camp Denali. Fort Richardson also hosts several non-military activities to include a Veterans Administration National Cemetery and state of Alaska Fish Hatchery.

As of June 2008, Fort Richardson was home to 5,814 Soldiers, with more than 8,300 family members here with their Soldiers. The fort employs more than 1,200 Army and Department of Defense civilian employees.

The fort encompasses 62,000 acres, which includes space for offices, family housing, a heliport, a drop zone suitable for airborne and air/land operations, firing ranges and other training areas.

Nearby mountain ranges offer Soldiers the opportunity to learn mountain/glacier warfare and rescue techniques.

Fort Richardson's nearest neighbor is Alaska's largest city, Anchorage, population 277,000. North of post are the communities of Chugiak/Eagle River, Wasilla and Palmer.

For more information about the local community, visit Web sites for the Anchorage Convention & Visitors Bureau (www.anchorage.net), the Chugiak/Eagle River Chamber of Commerce (www.cer.org), the Wasilla Chamber of Commerce (www.wasillachamber.org) or the Palmer Chamber of Commerce (www.palmerchamber.org).

Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson

Fort Richardson will combine with Elmendorf Air Force Base as a joint base in 2010, in accordance with 2005 Base Realignment and Closure recommendations which became law Nov. 9, 2005.

One of those recommendations called for merging installation management functions at 12 sites where two or more military installations belonging to different services exist in close proximity.

Installation management functions, in simple terms, are all the day-to-day activities that provide for the operation of the installation such as snow plowing, child care, utilities and housing.

Fort Richardson and Elmendorf Air Force Base are two installations among the 12 sites designated to merge. Specifically, the law says we will "Realign Fort Richardson, AK, by relocating the installation management functions to Elmendorf AFB, AK, establishing Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson, AK."

According to the BRAC law this merger must be accomplished not later than Sept. 15, 2011. Planning for this merger is on-going.

The effects of creating Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson, commonly referred to as JBER, should be transparent to the people who live and work on Fort Richardson.

The quality and levels of base support services will not decrease as a result of this merger and, in some cases, may increase. Convenience will not be sacrificed either.

The "store front" customer service locations such as the Housing Office, Legal Services and Lodging will all remain in their current locations. All in all, JBER should result in more efficient and effective delivery of base support services to everyone on the installation.

History of FORT WAINWRIGHT

Many political and military leaders advocated building military bases in Alaska several years prior to World War II. Finally, when war threatened in 1939, Congress granted $4 million to construct an Army cold-weather experimental station at Fairbanks.

The purpose of the station, named Ladd Field, was to test aircraft operations in arctic conditions. However, when war broke out with Japan in late 1941, Ladd Field became a critical link in the Alaska-Siberia Lend Lease route. From 1942 until the fall of 1945, American crews flew almost 8,000 aircraft to Ladd Field, where the planes were turned over to Soviet air crews for the continued flight to the east. The planes were eventually used by the Soviets against Germany.

Eielson Air Force Base, located 26 miles southeast of Fairbanks, was built shortly after the Army Air Corps separated from the Army and became the U.S. Air Force by an act of Congress in 1947. At that time, Ladd Field was also under Air Force control.

Eielson today is home to the 354th Fighter Wing, which supports U.S. Army Alaska with close air support, theater airlift, reconnaissance missions and weather analysis.

On Jan. 1, 1961, the Army reassumed control of Ladd Field and renamed the installation Fort Wainwright, after Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright. Wainwright and his men conducted a gallant defense of the Bataan Peninsula and Corregidor Island in the Philippines during the early months of World War II.

Fort Wainwright has been home to several units, including the 171st Infantry Brigade (Mechanized), a Nike-Hercules battalion, the 172nd Infantry Brigade, and the 6th Infantry Division (Light).

General
Jonathan Wainwright

The 6th ID (L) was deactivated in July 1994 and replaced by the U.S. Army Alaska, with headquarters moving to Fort Richardson.

The major units at Fort Wainwright today are the 1st Stryker Brigade Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division, and Aviation Task Force 49.

The fort is also home to Medical Department Activity-Alaska, Dental Activity-Alaska and to Bassett Army Community Hospital. The hospital is named for Capt. John Bassett, a doctor killed while trying to evacuate wounded Soldiers during the Battle of Attu during World War II.

Fort Wainwright has a commitment to excellence in efforts to make the post a better place to live and work. With the move of 6th ID (L) headquarters to Fort Wainwright in 1990, many new sets of family quarters were built, as well as a PX/Commissary mall, physical fitness center and maintenance facilities.

Older family quarters, barracks and offices were renovated. A new combined arms collective training facility provides state-of-the-art modern warfare training opportunities, and a new hospital opened in spring 2007. The revitalization of older quarters and construction of new quarters continues.

The fort has 7,700 Soldiers and approximately 8,200 family members. About 1,250 Army and DoD civilian employees work at Fort Wainwright.

History of FORT GREELY

Maj. General
Adolphus W. Greely

The post's history began in 1942 when a "doughboy" named 1st Lt. William L. Brame, of the 138th Infantry Regiment, led an advance detail of 15 men to the Big Delta Area to establish an Army Air Corps Base. Brame was post commander.

Brame was part of an organization activated in Seattle that consisted of an infantry platoon, quartermaster, medical, and finance and signal detachments.

These first Army units set up camp June 30, 1942, at what was to become Station 17, Alaskan Wing, Air Transport Command. Throughout World War II, the post was a rest/refueling spot for American pilots ferrying aircraft to Ladd Army Airfield (now Fort Wainwright) for the Lend Lease Program.

Fort Greely continued as an Army Air Corps Base until 1945 when it was put on an inactive status. For the next two years, the Civil Aeronautics Authority and a skeleton crew of Army personnel maintained the installation.

In April 1947, the War Department designated the base as the site for the first post-war cold weather maneuver, "Exercise Yukon", staged during the winter of 1947-1948.

The installation was reactivated May 1, 1948, and was officially transferred to the Department of the Army and redesignated as an Army post. Under this directive the post was to be called United States Troops, Big Delta, Alaska. The post was named as the site for the Arctic Training Center in 1948. It was chosen because it combined the extreme winter conditions of the Alaska interior with a great variety of terrain, including rivers, lakes, swamps and open plains.

Originally the center consisted of three subdivisions in addition to the post headquarters personnel: The Army Arctic Indoctrination School, Army Training Company (School Troops) and the Test and Development Section. The school was established to teach living and movement under extreme arctic and subarctic conditions to personnel from all branches of the Armed Services.

The post was redesignated the Arctic Training Center July 1, 1949. Later that month the Arctic Test Branch was established by cadre at Fort Knox, Kentucky, and the transfer of personnel from each of the Army Field Forces Boards, located in the Zone of the Interior.

The post was renamed the Army Arctic Center September 1, 1952. Construction began on the permanent buildings located a mile from the airfield in 1953. These buildings are referred to as "main post" today, while the original temporary buildings near the airfield are called "old post". During the same year, the U.S. Army Chemical Corps-Arctic Test Team was established at the post. A major construction program for permanent-type buildings was initiated in 1954. The program included post headquarters, post engineer facilities, auditorium, fire station, power plant, warehouses, photographic laboratory, maintenance shops, and the Cold Weather and Mountain School facilities. In addition, 96 sets of quarters, and three 200-man barracks, a post office, provost marshal facility, dispensary, library, and personnel office were constructed. Barracks space was converted to what is now known as the Composite Building, Building 663.

Three five-man cells work eight-hour shifts at the center. During the shifts, crews run through required training and work through scenarios written to challenge their procedures and stress levels

The post was designated Fort Greely August 6, 1955 in honor of Major General Adolphus Washington Greely, arctic explorer and founder of the Alaska Communications System. Greely was responsible for the construction of thousands of miles of telegraph lines throughout the United States, Puerto Rico, the Philippines and Alaska. More than 45,000 miles of telegraph lines were completed in Alaska alone.

Congress awarded Greely the Medal of Honor in 1935 for "his life of splendid public service." During 1955, a combined post exchange/theater building, service club and gymnasium were constructed.

The Chemical Corps Arctic Test Team was redesignated a Class II activity in 1956, and in 1957 was renamed the U.S. Army Chemical Corps – Arctic Test Activity. An Officers' Open Mess and Non-Commissioned Officers' Mess along with 72 more sets of quarters were constructed. The Arctic Test Group was renamed the Arctic Test Board, and the Arctic Indoctrination School became the Army Cold Weather and Mountain School when the Mountain Training Center at Fort Carson, Colorado was deactivated. A major landscaping program was initiated in 1958, and in 1959 a recreation building and an addition to the PX were constructed.

During the 1960s, 93 additional sets of family quarters, a new chapel, another 200-man barracks and maintenance buildings were built. The Department of the Army redesignated the Cold Weather and Mountain School as the Northern Warfare Training Center (NWTC) April 1963.

NWTC was then given the mission of training units in the conduct of warfare in northern areas of operation. A year later the Arctic Test Board was renamed the Arctic Test Center.

Fort Greely became part of the 172nd Infantry Brigade in 1974, after the disestablishment of the United States Army, Alaska. The post was under the command of Forces Command at Fort McPherson, Georgia.

With the activation of the 6th Infantry Division (Light) and the U.S. Army Garrison, Alaska, March 23, 1986, Fort Greely became one of the three posts of the division's one installation concept.

Fort Greely celebrated its 50th anniversary (in conjunction with the annual Midnight Sun Festival) with a three-day festival in June 1992. The 6th Infantry Division (Light) was deactivated in a formal ceremony on July 6, 1994, at Fort Wainwright, Alaska. The actual effective date for the deactivation occurred on July 26, 1994, becoming U.S. Army Alaska (USARAK).

In 1995, the installation underwent Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC) and was essentially warm based. In 2001, it was partially removed from the BRAC list to support the national objective of missile defense. It was reduced to its current size of 7,200 acres, and the surrounding ranges and training lands were transferred to Fort Wainwright.

Today, Fort Greely proudly serves as an integral part of the Nation's Ballistic Mission Defense System (BMDS) and is a National Security Asset.

FORT GREELY MISSION

A ground-based missile interceptor is lowered into its missile silo during a recent emplacement at the Missile Defense Complex at Fort Greely, Alaska. Interceptors are emplaced in two fields on the 800-acre complex.

Fort Greely's installation mission is mid-course missile defense (destroying threat missiles in their midcourse phase). Fort Greely is also host to the military missions of the Cold Regions Test Center, and by Intra-Service Support Agreement, the Northern Warfare Training Center.

Fort Greely's Garrison mission can be compared to an isolated city which provides government and a myriad of public services including transportation, police and fire protection. With our remote location there is special emphasis on workforce morale welfare and recreation, housing, health services, child development, religious services, and support to the local school system. At Fort Greely, housing is provided primarily for the Soldiers and for Department of Defense civilians and contractors as authorized.

Fort Greely Garrison's supported tenants include: Ground-Based Midcourse Missile Defense; 49th Missile Defense Battalion; 59th Signal Battalion; Cold Regions Test Center; U.S. Army Alaska; U.S. Army Corps of Engineers; Army and Air Force Exchange Service; Defense Commissary Agency; Delta/Greely School District; U.S. Post Office; and by ISSA, the Northern Warfare Training Center.

DRIVING

For the adventurous, the Alaska Highway offers one of the most exciting routes north. Your PCS orders must specifically authorize travel via the Alaska Highway if you wish to drive. Originally known as the Alcan (Alaska-Canada) Highway, the Alaska Highway weaves northwest for 1,488 miles from Dawson Creek, British Columbia, to Fairbanks.

Travel publications are available from your Army Community Service and on the Web, as well as along the Alaska Highway and in bookstores in the Pacific Northwest. Perhaps the best source is "The Milepost," the only all-north travel guide, which lists all attractions and facilities along all northern highways in Canada and Alaska, mile by mile.

The Alaska Highway is now paved, with the pavement varying considerably in quality. However, since road construction in the north is limited to the summer season, you can expect occasional long stretches of road under repair or construction. Depending on the weather, the routing around or through these construction sites can be very muddy or exceedingly dusty. The dust situation is only bad after long dry spells. To keep the dust out, keep some air pressure in the car by closing the windows and turning on the heater, fan or air conditioner.

Finally, take it easy and take your time. Stop now and then to relax and take in the rugged North Country; about 350 miles a day on the varying surfaces of northern roads is plenty.

Your best source about traveling into Canada is the Canadian Tourism Commission Web site, www.canada.travel/splash.en-us.html, or by mail at:

55 Metcalfe St., Ste.
600, Ottawa, ON Canada K1P 6L5

Another good resource is "Customs Information for Visitors to Canada and Seasonal Residents." To obtain a copy, call (800) 959-2221 and ask for pamphlet RC4161, or visit the Canadian Border Services Agency publications Web site at www.cbsa-asfc.gc.ca/publications/pub/pubs-eng.html and download document number RC4161 in either HTML or PDF format.

The pamphlet has information ranging from firearms rules to rules about your children and pets.

According to the U.S. State Department web site (www.travel.state.gov), under the Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative:

All persons traveling by air outside of the United States are required to present a passport or other valid travel document to enter or re-enter the United States.

CURRENTLY:

U.S. citizens need to present either (a) a passport, passport card (scheduled to be in full production beginning in July 2008), or WHTI-compliant document; or (b) a government-issued photo ID, such as a driver's license, along with proof of citizenship, such as a birth certificate.

LATER:

On June 1, 2009, the U.S. government will implement the full requirements of the land and sea phase of WHTI. The proposed rules require most U.S. citizens entering the United States at sea or land ports of entry to have a passport, passport card, or WHTI-compliant document.

WHTI compliant documents include:

- Trusted Traveler Cards (NEXUS, SENTRI, or FAST)
- State Issued Enhanced Driver's License (when available)
- Enhanced Tribal Cards (when available)
- U.S. Military Identification with Military Travel Orders
- U.S. Merchant Mariner Document when traveling in conjunction with official maritime business
- Native American Tribal Photo Identification Card
- Form I-872 American Indian Card

For further information see the U.S. Department of Homeland Security's Customs and Border Protection travel Web site at www.cbp.gov/xp/cgov/travel/vacation/ready\_set\_go/.

Be sure you know what is required before you embark on a trip. Soldiers, unless they are traveling as tourists, do not need passports under these new rules. Family members can get no-fee tourist passports if they are on official travel, but the Department of Defense encourages all Soldiers and family members to get regular passports. No-fee passports are not accepted for unofficial travel (going home on leave, etc.).

United States citizens can visit the State Department's travel Web site, www.travel.state.gov, or call the U.S. National Passport Information Center: 1-877-4USA-PPT.

Reentry into the United States upon reaching Alaska is the responsibility of the traveler. Canadian immigration officers will usually caution persons if they may have problems returning to the United States. Reentry can be simplified if you list all purchases made in Canada before you reach the border, keep sales slips and invoices separate, and pack the purchases for convenient inspection.

Once you reach Tok, Alaska, Fort Richardson-bound personnel will turn onto the Glenn Highway for the last 328 miles to Anchorage. Fort Wainwright-bound personnel will continue northwest on the Richardson Highway for another 208 miles or so to Fairbanks. It's a long haul, but the scenery is magnificent and, in summer, the fishing opportunities along the way are almost limitless.

Taking extra care

Some extra care should be taken when making the long drive north. When you reach the Canadian border, you should have at least $500 in cash, traveler's checks or credit cards, plus $75 for each adult passenger.

The major cities along the route, Fort Nelson, British Columbia; Watson Lake, Yukon Territory; Whitehorse, Yukon Territory; and Beaver Creek, Yukon Territory, are spaced at roughly 300-mile intervals.

In between these communities, various small businesses exist to provide gas, food and lodging.

Insurance coverage required in Canada is higher than normally required in the United States. You should check in advance with your automobile insurance provider to make certain your coverage is adequate for Canada and complies with all of that country's requirements. You should have a copy of the policy or some other proof of this insurance in hand when you enter Canada. Normally your insurance company will fax you a sheet of paper noting that your insurance is adequate and in force for a trip through Canada if you ask them to do so.

Although auto repair is generally available along the Alaska Highway, it can be expensive and there can be delays if you have to wait for parts specific to your vehicle. It's always a good idea to carry a few common items made for your vehicle, such as fan belts and properly inflated spare tires.

Even if you don't know how to install these items, any competent mechanic you contact along the road should be able to help. And, besides those items specific to your vehicle, a repair kit containing some general-purpose items is a good idea as well. Along with a toolkit of basic wrenches, pliers and screwdrivers, jumper cables and all-purpose tape (such as duct tape) are recommended.

Cautions for the Alaska Highway

Make sure your tires are in good condition and carry a mounted spare tire at least the equal of the tires on the road. The small, temporary donut spares commonly provided with small, lightweight vehicles are impractical on the Alaska Highway.

During the winter months, from October through April, cars need cold-weather protection and gear. This may include an engine heater, antifreeze, thinner oil, studded snow tires and warm clothing for the driver and passengers. Tire chains are occasionally required for some stretches during the winter months, so be sure you carry a set with you and know how to install them.

Temperatures may fall to minus 50 degrees in the winter.

Remember, not all businesses are open all year, nor are they available 24 hours a day; plan ahead for gas, food and lodging.

Although most highways in Alaska are paved, the freezing and thawing of permafrost (permanently frozen ground) in the northern three-fourths of the state and in Yukon Territory can cause the road to buckle. If you drive too fast on these stretches, you can lose control or you can cause severe damage to your vehicle. Slow down and proceed with care when this is the case.

Winterizing Your Car

Probably the only thing you need to do to your car before bringing it to Alaska is to make sure it is in good shape. This includes a tune-up, maybe changing belts and hoses that are more than two years old, and making certain your coolant is adequate to 50 below zero or colder. The decision to further modify your vehicle can generally wait until you arrive. The mechanics at the post service stations and local garages will be happy to advise you.

Many people with orders to Alaska wonder if they need to get new tires. Whether to do so depends a great deal upon your abilities as a winter driver. Obviously old, bald tires are a bad idea in the winter and regular street tires offer little traction. However, many people get along just fine all year with all-season radial tires. Others feel more comfortable with snow tires, while others have studded tires on two or all four wheels.

There is no magic formula. Even a sport utility vehicle with four studded tires can spin out if the driver encounters black ice or is not driving cautiously.

Here's what the old-timers suggest:

- An engine block heater is a must to fight off winter temperatures. Cars should not have to be plugged in unless temperatures drop below zero, but the state recommends plugging in your vehicle at temperatures below 20 degrees to help mitigate pollution. Portable interior car heaters are prohibited because they are a fire hazard and an extra drain on the electrical system.
- Another important thing is to change to an arctic-weight lubricant for the differential and transmission.
- You may want to include a northern (hotter) thermostat. If stationed at Fort Wainwright, a battery blanket may further aid in starting your car on cold winter mornings.
- The oil should be changed to 5W-30 or to special arctic oil. Check your owner's manual carefully before deciding on which oil to use. In the extreme cold, lubricants can thicken, so thinner oil is almost always the right way to go.
- The circulating/freeze plug heater and other mechanical modifications will probably be fine if left in place, but it's not a bad idea to check them out to see if they work come September.

Winter driving tips

People who have never driven on ice and snow will need to rethink their driving techniques. Snow and ice on the road greatly reduce the traction of your tires so it takes longer to start, longer to stop and longer to get where you're going. Make sure you allow extra time for everything when driving in the winter.

Speeds that may be safe in summer are not safe on ice and snow. The distance required to bring a vehicle to a safe stop on a slippery surface may be three to nine times longer than on dry pavement.

Always adjust your speed to road and weather conditions.

To avoid winter collisions, maintain a minimum distance of 50 yards between your vehicle and someone else's. More is better.

When slowing down or stopping, don't slam on the brakes or you will probably skid and lose control. Pump the brakes gently, and shift to a lower gear if possible. In case of a skid, turn the steering wheel in the direction of the skid. Cars with ABS brakes may specifically state in the owner's manual that you avoid pumping the brakes and allow the system to do its job in bringing your vehicle to a smooth stop.

Do not rely exclusively on this recommendation, as sometimes conditions are so slick that ABS brakes may lock your wheels. When you brush the snow off your windshield, take the time to clear the rear and side windows, too. In winter, vision in every direction is paramount and may help prevent an accident.

Taking the ferry

One of the most beautiful ways to travel to Alaska is via the Alaska Marine Highway System, operated by the state. The ferries carry vehicles and passengers and travel at a leisurely pace, with observation decks, staterooms and food service.

The system consists of two separate ferry routes: Southeast and Southcentral. The southeastern Alaska route connects Bellingham, Wash., and Prince Rupert, British Columbia, with the Alaska towns of Ketchikan, Wrangell, Petersburg, Sitka, Juneau, Haines and Skagway.

The latter two connect with the Alaska Highway leading to Delta Junction, Fairbanks and Anchorage. The trip from Bellingham to Haines takes three days. There are a couple of sailings per week in the summer and only one per week during the winter. From Haines, it's another 782 miles to Anchorage and 665 miles to Fairbanks by road. (See the section on driving the Alaska Highway for additional information.) Since 2000, another ferry route has been opened that allows passengers and vehicles to ride as far as Seward, Alaska, about 130 miles south of Fort Richardson or about 475 miles south of Fort Wainwright. Sailings are relatively infrequent, about once a month.

Passenger travel, including a stateroom on the ferry, is at government expense. Your Transportation Office can issue you a Government Travel Request for passage or you can be reimbursed when you arrive at your new duty station in Alaska.

If you did not ship a POV to Alaska, you can receive reimbursement for the cost of the vehicle placed on the ferry; the vehicle cannot exceed 800 cubic feet. If you have already shipped a privately owned vehicle through the government and decide to take the ferry and place another vehicle on the ferry, you may be reimbursed for the cost of transporting your vehicle on the ferry.

Personal Property

All personnel assigned to Fort Wainwright, Richardson and Greely are authorized to ship personal property, household goods and one privately owned vehicle, plus travel to Alaska at government expense. If shipping a POV at government expense, a member may still be authorized to drive to the new duty station, because driving falls under travel entitlement and shipping a POV falls under a shipping entitlement. The following information will help each member prepare for a move to the Great Land.

Upon receipt of orders to Alaska, Soldiers should contact their local Transportation Office. Start planning your move well in advance. It normally takes between 30 to 40 days for personal property to reach Alaska, depending on how much you ship and where you ship it.

The maximum HHG weight allowance that a member can ship is determined by grade and whether or not you are serving an accompanied or unaccompanied tour. If your shipment exceeds your weight entitlement, it could cost you hundreds, even thousands of dollars, so estimate the weight of your goods carefully before shipping. A good estimate is 1,000 pounds per room, excluding bathrooms, but including basements and garages.

Also, Alaska is considered an administrative weight restricted area for single, unaccompanied Soldiers in grades as follows: Staff sergeants and below; sergeant first class and above residing on post; and officers residing on post. Administrative weight limitations are located in the Overseas Consignment Guide; contact your local Transportation Office to find out your restricted weight.

Personal property can be moved two ways: government contracted move, or Do-It-Yourself (DITY) move. The DITY move is an incentive program in which the government will pay a service member 95 percent of what it would pay a contractor to move the same amount of HHG the authorized distance.

This is a taxable incentive and federal tax (approx. 28 percent) and applicable state tax will be taken off the top. The DITY move must be pre-approved by the origin Transportation Office. You also can choose to do a partial DITY move and have the rest of your HHG shipped by the government-contracted method.

Each individual coming to Alaska also is authorized a baggage shipment, but keep in mind that the weight of the baggage shipment counts against your maximum weight allowance. Some members elect to simply combine their personal property into one single shipment. This works well if you are planning on taking leave en route to Alaska.

If you are making a single shipment, you may want to request a partial delivery. The partial delivery will enable you to receive certain items when you arrive and have the government temporarily store the remaining personal property until you receive quarters. Items designated for a partial delivery must be designated at time of pick-up and "partial delivery" should be authorized on your government bill of lading.

This should be requested in advance at the originating Transportation Office. You also can have property that you choose not to bring to Alaska placed in non-temporary storage for the duration of your overseas tour. Ask your Transportation Office to discuss the Overseas Consignment Guide Instructions for your new overseas duty station.

In lieu of household goods, your mobile home may be shipped, but extreme caution is needed. This can be extremely frustrating and expensive. The amount that you can expect to be reimbursed is based upon maximum HHG weight you are authorized to ship in accordance with JFTR, Vol. 1, Chapter 5.

Excess costs can be extremely high, in addition to the extensive modifications that may be required before it can enter the state. If you plan on moving your mobile home, you should contact the Transportation Office. You can also call the Alaska Department of Transportation, Weights and Measures Section, (907) 341-3200, for information on necessary modifications. There are no on-post mobile home lots. A limited number of facilities are available in nearby communities.

Your local personnel section can help you concerning a sponsor and concurrent travel. You must apply for a sponsor and concurrent travel for family members before leaving your present duty station. In most cases, if housing is available, concurrent travel is authorized. Have your sponsor check on this.

Members should be advised that if they plan to report to their new overseas duty station as a single member, then return home and get married, the government will not pay for movement of newly-acquired dependents and personal property. Dependent status must be acquired prior to the member arriving at his/her overseas duty station. For more information, contact your local Transportation Office.

Here are some suggestions you may want to consider in shipping your household goods to Alaska:

- Normally, non-temporary storage is authorized at the departing duty station, not at the gaining duty station.
- Large, oversized or over-stuffed furniture will not fit into many of the quarters.
- Long couches and workbenches, usually longer than 7 feet, 6 inches, will not go around the entrance corners, so should not be shipped.
- Queen-size box springs, unless in two parts, may not fit up the stairways. Two-piece king size beds are not a problem, but very large dressers may be.
- Freezers of more than 17 cubic feet will not fit through the doors.
- Television antennas are not generally needed.
- Government quarters are equipped with appliances, including washer, dryer, stove and refrigerator. Some have dishwashers. Drapes are not furnished.
- Liquid items, such as canned food and drinks, will not be accepted for shipment between October and May 1 because of the danger from freezing if your goods must be left in an unheated area for any reason.

Shipping your car

Military members assigned to Alaska are authorized to ship one vehicle, maximum of 800 cubic feet, at government expense. This may be in addition to driving another vehicle to Alaska. Receiving proper counseling for shipping a POV from the departing Transportation Office is a must before taking any action to ship a POV.

Many people choose to drive to Seattle, ship their vehicle from there, and fly to Alaska. If you are closer to the East Coast, you may want to ship your vehicle from an authorized port/vehicle processing center serving your departing post. Transit times vary from each port/vehicle processing center but shouldn't exceed 40 days.

Personnel assigned to Fort Wainwright and/or Fort Greely can pick up their vehicles in Fairbanks. Those assigned to Fort Richardson can pick up their vehicles in nearby Anchorage. Personnel can receive specific information for Vehicle Processing Centers at Fairbanks or Anchorage, such as, address, maps, phone number and hours of operation from the departing Transportation Office.

The port shipping activity/vehicle processing center will conduct a joint inspection of your vehicle when you deliver it and do an inventory of all accessories. The port shipping activity will annotate the vehicle-shipping document as to the condition of your vehicle when it is turned in. Be sure you get a legible copy of that inspection prior to leaving the port activity/vehicle processing center.

When you arrive on post at your new duty station, check with the Fairbanks or Anchorage Vehicle Processing Center to see if your vehicle has arrived and provide a phone number where you can be notified when it does arrive.

Remember, if the receiving Vehicle Processing Center cannot reach you, you may experience a delay in receiving your vehicle. In Alaska, that can be a very unpleasant wait, especially in the winter.

When you pick up your vehicle, the vehicle processing center will conduct another joint inspection of your vehicle to note the car's condition when it arrived. Any damages that occurred between turn in and pick up should be noted on the Privately Owned Vehicle Shipping Document, Department of Defense Form 788. Remember, it is your responsibility to ensure that the receiving vehicle processing center properly annotates all potential damages on the DD Form 788 prior to accepting the vehicle and departing the port facilities. Questions concerning potential damages should be referred to the legal claims office at the origin or destination duty station.

Preparing your vehicle for shipment is essential before turning it into the port/vehicle processing center for shipment.

Before you deliver your POV to the port/vehicle processing center, you should ensure:

- It is in safe operating condition; if not, it will not be accepted.
- A complete set of keys is turned in to the port along with the vehicle.
- The radiator is protected with antifreeze for temperatures of 50 below zero.
- The battery is fully charged.
- The gas tank is no more than 1/4 full.
- Only essential tools and accessories are left inside. A few items such as thermos bottles and seat cushions are permitted for driving to the port.

Welcome Center and Temporary Lodging

Upon arrival at forts Wainwright, Richardson and Greely, Soldiers must sign in at the Welcome Center.

At Fort Wainwright, Soldiers sign in at Bldg. 3401. During duty hours (Monday through Friday 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.) report to the MPD Front Desk. After duty hours and holidays report to Bldg 1555, Staff Duty. If you arrive in Fairbanks by air, you should call the Welcome Center at (907) 353-2273. This line is manned 24 hours a day.

At Fort Richardson, Soldiers sign in at Bldg. 600, Room 103. The Welcome Center is open from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday for inprocessing. After 5 p.m., a Staff Duty is available to sign you in off leave only and to contact your unit for a sponsor. Soldiers arriving at the Anchorage airport can call the Welcome Center at 384-0425 for transportation to the Welcome Center. Soldiers arriving in Alaska from Oct. 1 to May 1 must arrive with their Gortex jacket, trousers and gloves due to possible extreme frigid temperatures.

At Fort Greely, go to Bldg. 556 during duty hours Monday through Friday and the Front Gate all other hours. The Welcome Center phone number is (907) 873-3663.

Soldiers MUST have Concurrent Travel in order to be authorized to bring their family with them when initially arriving to Alaska and in order to be paid for the dependent travel. This travel decision MUST be processed through the losing installation Levy Section BEFORE PCSing to Alaska. If family members travel BEFORE they are authorized, YOU will NOT be reimbursed for their travel. If you are authorized to bring your family members to Alaska with you initially, their names must be listed on your orders.

If your family is with you in concurrent travel status, you will be sent to lodging, which is open 24 hours a day. Lodging is available on a space-available basis for Soldiers without reservations, arriving at or departing on permanent change of station orders.

All personnel traveling on PCS orders are required to check with the Lodging Office before seeking transient accommodations off post.

Only Family Housing can authorize a Temporary Lodging Allowance; you must check in with them as soon as you are scheduled for in-processing.

TLA is available for single Soldiers in the pay grade of E-6 and above, married Soldiers in all grades arriving without family members due to deferred travel and for all married Soldiers on concurrent travel who are accompanied by command-sponsored family members. TLA is authorized to partially offset the cost of temporary lodging for the first 20 days after arrival, unless government housing is immediately available. TLA can be extended on a case-by-case basis.

Finance

Whether you are stationed at Fort Richardson or Fort Wainwright, there is a military finance office to assist you in resolving most of your financial arrangements during your in-processing.

C Detachment, 125th Finance, handles all the pay accounts for Soldiers stationed at forts Wainwright and Greely and the Defense Military Pay Office-Richardson does the same for Soldiers at Fort Richardson.

The DMPO-Richardson Finance Office is located in Bldg. 600, telephone 384-1174. Their hours of operation are Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. The office is open Thursdays from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. The Web site for the DPMPO-Richardson is www.usarak.army.mil/DMPO.

Fort Wainwright's C Det., 125th Finance, is located on the third floor of the Welcome Center in Bldg. 3401. The customer service telephone number is 353-CDET (2338). The hours of operation are 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4:30 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays (closing at 2:45 p.m. on Friday). The office is closed on Thursday for Warrior Time Training.

The Department of Defense authorizes a Cost of Living Allowance for all Soldiers stationed in Alaska. The amount of COLA a service member draws depends on their rank, years of service, duty location, barrack and non-barrack residency and the number of command-sponsored family members. For more information, see <http://perdiem.hqda.pentagon.mil/perdiem>.

Soldiers stationed at Fort Greely will receive hardship duty pay—location to compensate the member for austere living conditions. Basic Allowance for Housing is payable to Soldiers authorized to obtain quarters on the economy. Family Separation Allowance is authorized while service members are on TCS/TDY orders and separated from their dependents.

Family Housing

Service members of all ranks on forts Wainwright, Richardson and Greely who elect to serve “with family members” (accompanied) tours and who receive command sponsorship, are eligible to apply for Family Housing. All service members, including all bachelor and/or unaccompanied officers and enlisted members, must check in at the Post Housing Office before making any arrangements for housing, including off-post housing.

All Alaska posts participate in the “Army Housing One Stop” Web site, which provides direct access to selected family housing floor plans and photos of family housing in Alaska. AHOS (<https://onestop.army.mil>) also has links to off-post rental opportunities and other sources of information regarding community housing. Your best source for current information on housing availability and opportunities will be AHOS. An additional source of current information for community housing is the Automated Housing Referral Network (www.AHRN.com).

For those who will be renting community housing on an interim or permanent basis, advance research and planning is essential for a successful move. Like most states, Alaska’s landlord-tenant laws are based upon the Uniform Residential Landlord and Tenant Act. The total amount charged for all deposits and prepaid rent (except the first month’s rent) cannot exceed two months rent. A rental lease is an important legal document and lays out responsibilities of both landlord and tenant.

Soldiers should pay close attention to the presence of a military clause, required notice of termination, etc. Alaska posts follow the Army-wide trend whereby the majority of families reside in the civilian community.

Tourism is one of the top three Alaska industries, leading to a very seasonal (i.e., high summer) demand for lodging and housing. This means that lodging books up early for the summer months and you are unlikely to find any suitable temporary accommodations in either Anchorage or Fairbanks if you do not plan ahead and reserve early. In Fairbanks, some apartment complexes even revert to daily and weekly temporary lodging customers during the summer to accommodate the influx of tourists and seasonal workers.

Use your sponsor for travel planning advice and assistance. Kennels fill up and most landlords do not accept pets. Use the links on AHOS to plan and confirm your accommodations (as well as those of family pets).

Single service members in grades staff sergeant and above can live in the bachelor quarters or off post. “Unaccompanied” Soldiers who are voluntarily separated are not authorized assignment to bachelor quarters; therefore, these service members must reside off post. Housing units on the Alaska posts are administered in compliance with AR 210-50, Army Housing Management, and local policies (which can be found on the appropriate AHOS link).

Family and senior enlisted and officer bachelor quarters units are each equipped with a dishwasher, garbage disposal, washing machine, clothes dryer, electric range and refrigerator. All personnel authorized quarters are allowed shipment of their full household goods weight allowance.

The doors, stairs and hallways of family housing may not accommodate oversized furniture or large freezers, so plan your move accordingly.

The Furnishings Management Office will provide “loaner issue” of furniture pending arrival of the member’s personal household goods. The “loaner issue” includes such items as beds, dining table with chairs and couches, but does not include bed linens, pots and pans or curtains.

Cookware and dinnerware can be obtained from the Army Community Service “loan closet” on a first-come, first-served basis. Government furnished appliances are currently electric.

While all housing constructed since 1994 have one- or two-car attached garages, the majority of the housing inventory does not. Each set of quarters is normally assigned a minimum of one parking space equipped with an engine heater outlet. The outlets have a 1,000-watt-maximum capacity, but even for very large engines, 850-watt heaters are adequate.

Running extension cords from inside quarters to heat additional vehicles is not authorized.

On-post housing consists of either two-, three- or four-bedroom, with some five-bedroom units available in the newer housing. Most units are two-story, four- and eight-plexes, with a full basement, while field-grade officer housing features duplexes (one floor with a basement) as well as newly constructed units which continue to come online at forts Richardson and Wainwright.

Housing for families with exceptional family members is available. It is very important for inbound families to coordinate any specific Exceptional Family Member Program (EFMP) requirements with the housing office in advance of arrival. Personnel must have family members screened for the program before arriving. A copy of DA Form 5888 (Family Member Deployment Screening Sheet) must accompany a copy of DA Form 4787 (Reassignment Processing) for approved travel for family members. Ensure that any EFMP family members are enrolled in the program prior to your PCS to Alaska and notify the Family Housing Office of your needs on arrival.

All maintenance and repair to family housing is accomplished by either self-help, which includes the occupant’s own efforts to perform handyman-type work, or service calls on an individual job basis as requested by the occupant. Service calls cover jobs beyond the scope of self-help.

Fort Wainwright Housing

Fort Wainwright Family Housing Office

Bldg. 3401

Office hours: 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday and Friday;

9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Thursday

DSN (317) 353-1190/1666, or commercial (907) 353-1190/1666.

Fort Wainwright has an inventory of approximately 1,619 family housing dwelling units. This includes 23 Domestic Leases of community rentals. Fort Wainwright neighborhoods are largely within walking distance of elementary schools, the Shoppette, child-care center and chapel.

Fort Wainwright has a variety of older and newer housing, with a mixture of units having garages. Projects are ongoing to renovate older style housing units as funds are available.

There are garages for four-plex, triplex, and most duplex and single-family quarters.

Depending on the number of PCS rotations and size of families departing, the wait for family housing can be from two months to a year. Typically, more than one-third of families assigned to Fort Wainwright reside off post in the Fairbanks North Star Borough area for part of their tour of duty. The DoD policy of raising BAH rates to eliminate most out-of-pocket expenses for rental housing has greatly improved the ability of all ranks to obtain adequate, affordable, off-post housing. You should check current BAH rates for your grade as soon as you are alerted for PCS to Alaska.

The vacancy rate is very seasonal and rental units become more expensive and difficult to obtain during the summer months. The winter rental vacancy rate is typically double that of the lowest summer rate.

Although assignment to government housing is not mandatory, all military members desiring to live off post must process through the Housing Services Office prior to entering into any rental or sales agreement.

HSO provides off-post housing services and is co-located in Bldg. 3401 with the Fort Wainwright Housing Office. HSO will assist both married and unaccompanied service members in locating affordable rental housing on the economy and may be contacted at 353-1660.

The Preferred Tenant Program is a service for Soldiers who need to reside off post for a period of one year or more while waiting for quarters, or who would prefer to reside off post permanently. PTP is specially designed for military personnel and offers a 3 percent below market rate for rentals and reduced security deposits. For information concerning this program, call 353-1642/1660.

In summer 2008, apartment rents averaged approximately $791 a month for one bedroom, $1,019 for two-bedroom units, and $1,807 for three-bedroom and larger apartments.

Utilities will vary in cost, depending on location, type of utilities and time of year. It is recommended that inbound families obtain a letter of credit, showing their most recent one-year payment history, from their current utility providers. If your credit history is good (it is a good idea to bring a letter showing good credit history from your previous utility company), Fairbanks area utilities will generally waive the deposit requirement prior to initiating service.

Very few rentals will accept pets of any kind and it is recommended that individuals with pets be prepared to make other arrangements for their care. There is an absolute limit of two pets in Army Family Housing and individuals arriving with excess pets will not be allowed to apply for or occupy government housing.

Rent for houses is higher than for apartments or duplexes with an accompanying higher utility rate, especially for all-electric homes. (Natural gas is not widely available in Fairbanks and oil is a common source of home heating.) There are a limited number of four- and five-bedroom houses available. Soldiers requiring four or five bedrooms should make sure that housing is waiting upon arrival prior to bringing their family members to Fort Wainwright.

During 2008, Fort Wainwright began the transition to become a Residential Community Initiative post. The ownership and management of what is currently government housing will be privatized in early 2009. This will bring Fort Wainwright online with the majority (over 95 percent) of Army housing which has already been privatized. This will allow for the continuing renovation and replacement of the housing stock for years to come.

Fort Richardson Housing

Fort Richardson Family Housing Office

Bldg. 600, Welcome Center

At Fort Richardson, the housing inventory grew to 1,154 homes in 2008. By August 2009, that number will grow to 1,242. All neighborhoods are in the main post area and most provide a magnificent view of the Chugach Mountains.

Housing units are located within walking distance of the mini-mall, schools and other services offered on post. Pets are limited to two per household by post policies.

Through an agreement with Elmendorf Air Force Base (adjacent to Fort Richardson), the Army has access to 250 newly constructed and new renovated homes which are managed by Aurora Military Housing (www.auroramilitaryhousing.com). Soldiers may contact Aurora directly; however they must be referred through the Fort Richardson Housing Office to become tenants.

There are three major Army Family Housing construction projects underway at Fort Richardson. These will provide modern officer and enlisted housing by replacing the oldest units in the inventory.

Housing Services Office rental assistance is available for all members of the uniformed services (active and reserve), their families and DoD civilian employees. All military members desiring to live off post must process through the Fort Richardson Housing Office prior to entering into any rental lease or sales agreement. In this office you will find assistance with lease agreements, landlord-tenant law and other helpful information about the area or mediation for complaints and special programs available in the local area.

The Preferred Tenant Program is the local version of the Army's unofficial rental guarantee program with which you may be familiar. Participating landlords agree to waive security deposits (except pet deposits) and offer slightly below market rental rates in return for an agreement to pay the rent by allotment and to sign a one-year lease. There is a rental vacancy rate of approximately seven percent in Anchorage in 2007, which means that it is generally a "renter's market" and there is a wide range of available and affordable rental units.

Rental listings and information may be found on the Automated Housing Referral Network Web site at www.AHRN.com. This service is available for information on rental listings, such as address, price, amenities, size and locations of homes. Contact information for landlords may also be found at this same site.

Median rental rates for unfurnished apartments are approximately $800-$899 for one-bedroom apartments, $900 to $999 for two bedrooms and $1,200 to $1,399 for three bedrooms.

Four-bedroom apartments start at $1,400. Apartments of this size are not common and you would typically have to rent a single detached home in order to obtain a rental of this size.

The landlord usually pays all utilities except for electricity and gas, which together average about $340 per month. Security deposits range from $400 to $2,000. Very few landlords accept pets, particularly large dogs.

During 2009, Fort Richardson will be transitioning, under the Base Realignment and Closure statute, to Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson, to be established under a new installation command, the 673rd Joint Base Command.

Privately Owned Vehicle Registration

Personnel newly assigned to Alaska with privately owned vehicles must register their POVs with the DES within five working days of arrival or acquisition of a POV. At the time of registration, the owner of the POV is required to produce a valid driver's license, current vehicle registration (state) and proof of automobile insurance. POVs can be registered at either installation's main gate visitor center. Additionally, on Fort Wainwright, POVs can be registered at the Welcome Center or after hours at the Police Station.

Privately Owned Weapons (Firearms) Registration

All Soldiers and civilians desiring to carry, transport and/or store firearms on Alaska Army posts must register the firearms with the DES. All Privately Owned Firearms must be declared upon entry to the installation at an access control point. Firearms can be registered at either the main gate visitor center or at either DES law enforcement desk. On Fort Wainwright Soldiers with weapons inbound with their household goods shipments can register their weapons prior to receiving the shipment.

For the purpose of this regulation, the term "post" refers to all areas within a respective post's main cantonment area as determined by access gained via a manned (military police/contracted guard/DA police) entry control point at any USARAK installation. Areas exempt from the firearm registration requirements are all USARAK ranges and training areas (i.e.; Fort Wainwright's Tanana Flats and Yukon Training Area; and all Fort Greely lands lying east of Jarvis Creek, south of the creek's intersection with 12-Mile Crossing and all lands west of the Richardson Highway).

USARAK Form 277 (Weapons Registration Record) must be carried whenever a registered weapon is carried or transported on a USARAK post. A USARAK Form 277 obtained at one post is valid at any other USARAK post. Personnel residing on USARAK posts must store their weapons in their unit arms room, bachelor officers' quarters, bachelor enlisted quarters, or on-post family quarters, and must register the weapon immediately upon arrival to the installation or upon acquiring the firearm(s).

Soldiers assigned a room in the barracks MUST store their firearms in the arms room. Firearms may NOT be stored or left unattended in vehicles. Firearms may be temporarily stored at with DES law enforcement desk location until proper storage can be obtained (unit arms room/quarters, etc.).

The Alaska state law that permits the carrying of "concealed" handguns by private citizens is NOT valid on any U.S. Army or other DoD installations or properties. The Commanding General has also published a policy that states no Soldiers assigned to USARAK will carry concealed weapons off post in public places. Refer to the policy letter for the specific details.

Recreational Vehicle Parking and Storage

On-post storage areas are available for recreational vehicles subsequently storage within the housing areas, barracks, BEQ/BOQ is not authorized (except on weekends immediately before or following use). Contact the Garrison Housing Liaison Office for details.

Permission to utilize recreational storage areas can be obtained from Fort Richardson Outdoor Recreation at 384-1475, Fort Wainwright Outdoor Recreation at 353-6349 and Fort Greely Outdoor Recreation at 873-4058.

Driver's Licenses

Military personnel are not required to get an Alaska driver's license or license plates if they are the sole owner of a vehicle and have a valid driver's license and current vehicle registration from another state.

Family members of military personnel and civilian employees are subject to Alaska licensing and registration requirements. Family members must get an Alaska driver's license within 90 days after arriving in the state. Civilians or family members employed on or off post must get an Alaska driver's license at the time of employment.

Cell Phones and Texting

IAW DoD and Army regulations cell phones may not be used while driving a motor vehicle unless used in conjunction with a completely "hands-free" device. Consequences for violations of these policies can result in the suspension or revocation of driving privileges on post. Text messaging or the reading of text messages is illegal in the State of Alaska and bears stiff penalties and mandatory court appearances.

PT Run Routes

Motor vehicle routes and vehicle speeds (15 MPH) are severely restricted at both installations during PT hours Monday thru Friday. Consequences for violations of these policies can result in the suspension or revocation of driving privileges on post. Check with your local DES or Garrison Operations for current policies and run routes.

Access Control

Each installation has slightly different access control policies. Check with the local DES physical security office for detailed instructions pertaining to access procedures for personnel who do not possess a DoD identification card. All special events (weddings, parties, sports events, community fairs, etc.) require advance coordination and approval. All contractors, vendors, sales personnel must be approved in advance as well by both the DES and the Garrison.

Fort Greely currently accommodates Outreach Spaces for special events at the Child Development Center with prior approval from the Director of Family, Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

Children with special medical or educational concerns are referred to the Special Needs Assessment Process prior to being allowed to attend CYS programs. The primary function of the SNAP team is to ensure each child is placed in the environment that most appropriately meets all of his/her needs. Special emphasis is placed on providing consistent care for each child in a safe, healthy, non-restrictive environment. Parents are invited to attend and participate in the team meeting scheduled to review the child's needs. Address questions and concerns to the OS Director.

Short-Term Alternate Child Care programs and Special Child Care Openings can be made available to meet the surge childcare needs of the community. Surge care is provided when an excessive number of children need care during a specific time period, such as during a community meeting like the Army Family Action Plan conference or during a special unit function.

The OS Director will work with the unit or agency to meet special unit childcare needs during any functions, such as a unit ball or field day. For information, please call the OS Director.

Volunteer Child Care in the Unit Setting provides training for unit members who volunteer to provide childcare during Family Support Group meetings, fundraisers and other unit functions.

Training should be requested at least four weeks prior to the anticipated need date unless it is an emergency.

The Central Enrollment Office also maintains a teenage babysitter referral list. Sitters must be at least 13 years of age

If space is available, youth as young as 11 years of age may participate in the training. However, they will not be included on the referral list until after their 13th birthday.

FCC providers are always needed for families wishing care for their children in a smaller setting and have proven to be a wonderful opportunity for spouses who wish to remain at home and begin professional careers as providers.

Special home categories include infant-toddler homes, school-age homes, special-needs homes, long-term evening and second-shift homes, and hourly care (drop-in) homes. Some homes have achieved an extra mark of excellence by receiving National Family Child Care accreditation or Child Development Associate credentials.

FCC directors are readily available with assistance and can provide immediate resources to get an FCC home started through their extensive "Toybrary." The Toybrary includes cribs, art supplies, toys, games and many other resources available for loan to FCC providers at no charge.

Specialized training is offered on a variety of topics, including small business practices. FCC provider training includes an in-home family interview, a 40-hour orientation, first aid and cardiopulmonary resuscitation classes, and nutrition and health information.

Fire, safety and health inspectors ensure all homes are safe before they begin operation, and a background screening is completed on all family members 12 years and older. Army regulations require that anyone providing regular care in Army quarters must be certified through the FCC office.

Persons interested in joining the FCC team should call or stop by the FCC office at Fort Richardson, 384-1500 (Bldg. 337), Fort Wainwright, 353-6266 (Bldg. 4176) or Fort Greely, 873-4593 (Bldg. 655) located in the Gabriel Auditorium.

Weekly Bible study groups and other adult religious education are also a vital part of the religious education program. Vacation Bible schools are an annual event at each post.

The Protestant and Catholic congregations offer a wide variety of activities through the innovative leadership of chapel councils.

These include adult and children's choirs, Catholic and Protestant Women of the Chapel, Christian men's organizations and many special family and social events.

Employment

Some Alaska Soldiers and many family members have part- and full-time jobs. Information concerning the availability of specific federal jobs both on and off post, for several agencies, can be found on the Internet.

A variety of Army positions are filled through the Civilian Personnel Advisory Center and competition for positions is keen. The higher wage rates paid in the local area, coupled with the smaller number of jobs available, leads to a very competitive labor market.

Information about all Army jobs (i.e. appropriated fund and non-appropriated fund) is available on the Internet at www.cpol.army.mil. Once at this site, click where it says "Employment," then on the next page, click where it says "Search for Jobs." This will take you to a page containing a vacancy announcement board where you can search Army vacancies.

The Alaska Civilian Personnel Advisory Center is located in Attu Hall, Bldg. 977, on Fort Richardson. You may call 384-1374 for general information about appropriated fund jobs, or 384-6984 for information about NAF job opportunities.

The Alaska CPAC also maintains two satellite offices, one at Fort Wainwright and one on Elmendorf Air Force Base.

The Elmendorf office provides CPAC services to the Alaska District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The Corps of Engineers CPAC Satellite Office is located in Bldg. 700-21. You may call 753-2824 for general information about appropriated fund jobs with the Corps.

The Fort Wainwright CPAC Office is located at 1045 Gaffney Road. Call 353-7208 for general information on appropriated fund jobs, or 353-6356 for information about NAF job opportunities. Military family members may be eligible for spouse preference and should contact the nearest CPAC office upon arrival.

Other job opportunity information can be obtained from the Army Community Service Employment Readiness Program coordinators at 384-6716 for the Fort Richardson-Anchorage area, or 353-4327 for the Fort Wainwright-Fairbanks area.

The state of Alaska maintains a Web site for job seekers. It is available at www.jobs.state.ak.us/akjb/. Information is also available at the following employment center locations:

Equal Employment Opportunity and Equal Opportunity

A workplace providing full and fair employment opportunities for the federal government's civilian workforce became law with the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Executive Order 11478, followed by the passage of laws, statutes and amendments, made it unlawful to discriminate in making decisions or treating people differently based on race, color, age, sex, religion, national origin, disability or reprisal.

U.S. Army Garrison Alaska and tenant units use a variety of tools to provide full and fair employment opportunities to their military and civilian workforces. Civil rights information, relative to the civilian workforce, is provided through the equal employment opportunity office at the following locations:

- Fort Richardson, Bldg. 658, rooms 116-118, telephone number, 384-2080;
- Fort Wainwright, Bldg. 1045, rooms 16 and 17, telephone numbers, 353-9063 or 353-6917.

The objectives are straightforward. The first is to provide a full and fair opportunity for all employees and applicants for employment, to the extent of their abilities, to pursue a career. The second is to provide for the nondiscriminatory treatment of all employees in the course of carrying out their duties in the work place.

The EEO program's objective is to implement and administer four specific functional areas: affirmative employment, complaints of discrimination, training and special emphasis programs, with a cadre of paid and collateral-duty staff to service the civilian workforce. The staff solicits comments and welcomes callers requesting service or advice.

Pamphlets, brochures and other publications explaining the implementation of civil rights in U.S. Army Garrison Alaska are available in the garrison EEO offices or by visiting the EEO Web page at www.wainwright.army.mil/eoo/links.htm.

For Soldiers, the Equal Opportunity program is an integral part of the Army mission. EO program information can be obtained from the U.S. Army Alaska EO advisor, at 384-0336.

Each post also has a garrison representative: The U.S. Army Garrison Alaska and Fort Richardson EO advisor is in Bldg. 658, Room 117, telephone 384-3931. The U.S. Army Garrison Alaska and Fort Wainwright EO advisor is in Bldg. 1045, Room 27, telephone 353-9234.

Armed Services YMCA of Alaska

The Armed Services YMCA of Alaska is located on Fort Richardson in the Warrior Zone (Bldg. 655) and on Fort Wainwright at 1047 Nysteen Road #3, and has served the Alaska military community continuously since 1941. Their mission is to focus on the needs of military personnel and their families. The Armed Services YMCA programs and services are offered to all service branches to include the Alaska National Guard and their family members.

Working in partnership with the military and civilian communities, the Armed Services YMCA provides more than 30 programs and services on a year-round basis. Programs and services differ between the two installations, largely in response to local needs and conditions. Outreach activities are available on a limited basis at Fort Greely.

Two military courtesy lounges are provided to the traveling military: the Atwood Military Lounge at Ted Stevens Anchorage International Airport and a facility at the Fairbanks International Airport. Free transportation for all military personnel is also provided through the free shuttle van service [Fort Richardson 384-FREE (3733); Fort Wainwright 353-FREE (3733)], giving rides to those in need.

In the Anchorage area, the Armed Services YMCA operates a full-service Women, Infants and Children (WIC) Program Clinic in Bldg. 600 and at the joint military hospital on Elmendorf Air Force Base, adjacent to Fort Richardson.

Additionally, military members have the opportunity of having quality volunteers care for their children while they are attending appointments or getting lab work done through Teddy's Part Time Child Watch, also a free service at the hospital on Elmendorf Air Force Base.

The ASYMCA operates the Thrift Store on Fort Wainwright, located at 102nd Street and Chestnut Street in the north post area.

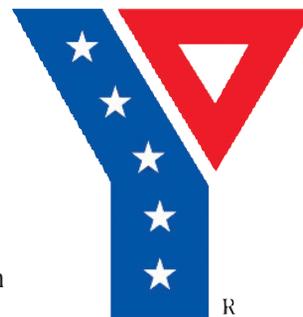

The Thrift Store features seasonal sales and discount programs, such as Operation Giveaway, throughout the year. Consignments and donations are accepted. Volunteers are always needed and appreciated. Call (907) 356-1211.

Known as the "go-to" organization, the Armed Services YMCA of Alaska provides support to organizational clubs (e.g. booster clubs, Family Readiness Groups, etc.) and individuals in need. "Filling the gap" is a trademark of the "Y."

For more information on the Armed Services YMCA, call 384-9622 on Fort Richardson or 353-5962 on Fort Wainwright.

Hours of operation vary.

The Armed Services YMCA of Alaska Central Office is located on Elmendorf Air Force Base, and can be reached at 552-9622.

American Red Cross

The American Red Cross is mandated by Congress to provide Service to the Armed Forces. This service focuses primarily on the Emergency Communication Message. The ECM provides service members and the Command with verified, objective, factual, timely and confidential statements on emergency situations in order to make informed leave decisions. This helps military families prevent, prepare for and respond to emergencies. The ECM, however, does not take the place of routine communication.

Emergency messages are about immediate family members.

These include:

- Father, mother, step-parent and legally adoptive parent
- Brother, sister and step and half-relations
- Children including step-children
- Person standing in place of a parent
- Only living blood relative
- Grandparent, great-grandparent
- Grandchild, step-grandchild
- Undeclared family member, i.e. fiancé

Requests for messages about other extended family members are not accepted without extenuating circumstances surrounding the relationship. If an aunt or uncle raised the service member (or family member), if a cousin was raised as a sibling in the same house or if native heritage is a factor, then a detailed description of the circumstances will be part of the message. Caseworkers are available 24/7 to provide this service through the SAF Centers' toll-free number at (877) 272-7337.

A message can be sent regarding emergencies related to a breakdown in child care arrangements or an eviction which jeopardizes the family. Birth notifications are sent when a baby is born and the father is deployed. Requests for financial assistance are most often referred to Army Emergency Relief. Working in conjunction with other agencies, caseworkers will make referrals when a request is beyond the scope of Red Cross.

When disaster strikes and families are separated, the Red Cross provides a Safe and Well website for those staying in Red Cross shelters to register online, allowing families to locate them. If family members are in another country and a conflict breaks out, International Tracing Services can help to locate loved ones.

Volunteers can learn military casework, get training to become disaster responders or help in the office. Check out the opportunities on the web at: www.alaska.redcross.org.

Veterinary Services

The U.S. Army Veterinary Services-Alaska provides veterinary medical care for all Department of Defense installations throughout the state. Direct your questions about policies regarding pets in Alaska to the Branch Chiefs at Fort Richardson at (907) 384-2865 and Fort Wainwright at (907) 361-3013. If you need further assistance you may contact the Commander at the Alaska District Veterinary Command at (907) 361-5452.

Animal companionship can be especially beneficial to a service family stationed in Alaska, but it should be emphasized pets are a privilege and keeping them on post entails many responsibilities.

Each family is authorized two pets, which must be registered with the post veterinarian. Pet owners are responsible for the well-being of their animals, as well as the sanitation of the environment. Owners who cannot adequately care for and maintain their pets will be asked to remove them from the installation. Indoor pets are the easiest to maintain because of the restrictive climate and compactness of the family housing area. There are strict regulations about the types of pets that may be kept outdoors and the environmental temperatures at which they must be removed to proper shelter. Alaska winters pose a significant health risk to most pet breeds if required to spend significant lengths of time outdoors.

Owners of parrots and other birds should contact their local USDA or state agriculture department prior to coming to Alaska to learn the most recent regulations governing movement of these birds through Canada to Alaska.

Veterinary services available include immunizations for rabies and other animal diseases, post registration, microchipping, health certificate examinations and sick call with diagnostic and therapeutic procedures for infectious diseases. Boarding and hospitalization are not available, and surgery capability is limited. Due to availability of civilian veterinarians in the local communities and limitations of the military veterinary services, emergency care should be sought off post.

Fort Wainwright's Veterinary Treatment Facility is in Bldg. 3597. Personnel may schedule appointments by calling (907) 361-3013, Mon. through Wed. and Fri. 8 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., and Thur. 1:30 to 4:00 p.m.

At Fort Richardson, the Veterinary Treatment Facility is in Bldg. 47-811, on the Davis Highway between Fifth and Sixth streets. Personnel may schedule appointments by calling (907) 384-2865, Mon. through Wed. and Fri. 8 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., and Thurs. 1:30 to 4:00 p.m.

For more information, you may access the USAG-AK Regulations 210-11 — Registration and Control of Animals and USAG-AK 40-1 — Zoonosis Control and Operation of Veterinary Treatment Facilities from the United States Army Alaska Web site at <http://www.usarak.army.mil/vet/>.

Spouse clubs

Fort Richardson

The Fort Richardson Spouses' Club offers a variety of activities for the spouses of active duty and retired service members. The club is also open to active duty, Alaska National Guard and Reserve spouses and current or retired Department of Defense civilians or their spouses.

During the club year (September through May), there are monthly functions planned as well as opportunities to become involved in a wide variety of classes and activities.

Joining the FRSC provides a chance to make lasting friendships, get involved with the community and create wonderful memories.

The club hosts an annual fundraiser, The Country Fair, every November. The money brought in from this event is given back to the community through scholarships, awards and donations. Military family members who are high school seniors and current college students may apply for the scholarships. Donations are given to the Fort Richardson community, the Anchorage area and national military support organizations. The FRSC also acts as a sponsor for the Soldier and NCO of the Quarter awards.

For more information, contact the Fort Richardson Spouses' Club, P.O. Box 5524, Fort Richardson, AK 99505.

Fort Wainwright

The Fort Wainwright Community Spouses' Club is open to spouses of active-duty and retired Soldiers from all branches of the armed services who are assigned, attached or living at Fort Wainwright and civilian employees GS-7 and above.

Civic and welfare projects are conducted for the benefit of Fort Wainwright and select organizations from the local community, while fostering a spirit of friendship, support and goodwill for its members through education, volunteerism and participation in community affairs.

For the last 25 years, the Fort Wainwright CSC has been host of the famous Holly Days Bazaar that brings in thousands of holiday shoppers looking for homemade crafts and uniquely Alaskan gifts. With more than 100 vendors from all over the state, the bazaar historically raises $20,000 or more each October, and this money is then used to enhance the educational opportunities for students, both young and old, in the form of scholarships.

In addition, the Fort Wainwright CSC is able to give generously to local nonprofits both on and off post.

Throughout the year, Fort Wainwright OSC members participate in monthly meetings, social functions and fun-filled events. Fun-loving and innovative members are always needed.

For more information, write to CSC President, P.O. Box 35054, Fort Wainwright, AK 99703 or e-mail www.wainwrightcsc.org.

MEDICAL CARE

Bassett Army Community Hospital at Fort Wainwright and the 3rd Medical Group hospital at Elmendorf Air Force Base are the two primary medical treatment facilities for Soldiers, family members and retirees and their families in Alaska. A number of civilian hospitals and civilian specialists augment the military facilities to provide complete medical care for personnel in Alaska.

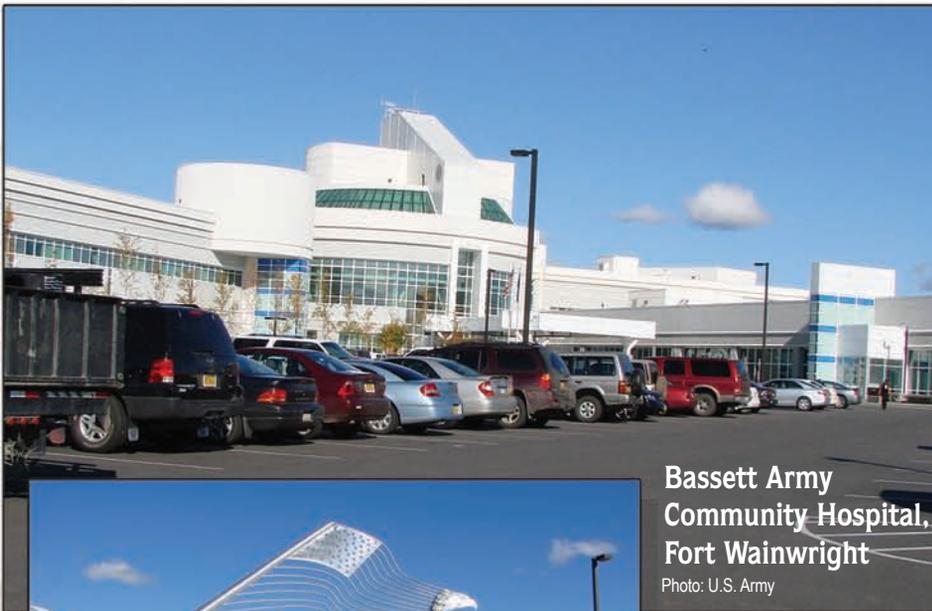

While the 3rd Medical Group hospital serves Fort Richardson, Medical Department Activity Alaska (MEDDAC-AK) operates a troop medical clinic on post. Anchorage offers the largest number of civilian hospitals and private physicians in Alaska and is an excellent referral source for military healthcare providers.

Emergency ambulance service is available on a 24-hour basis on all posts and bases in Alaska for active-duty members and their families residing on a post or base. For active duty, dependents and retirees eligible for care who live off post or off base in Anchorage and Fairbanks, dialing 911 can access this service. Callers should be prepared to provide their name and phone number, location of patient, number and gender of patients and the nature of the illness or injury.

A parent must accompany dependent minors in order for them to receive treatment of any kind, unless a dire emergency exists.

Parents who leave their children with friends while traveling out of the local area should always obtain a limited power of attorney from Legal Assistance authorizing a responsible person to consent to medical care for their children.

All family members are required to be screened for enrollment in the Exceptional Family Member Program before being granted command sponsorship in Alaska. Availability of specialized medical care is limited in Alaska, so some medical problems cannot be supported here.

For information about screening or the medical aspects of EFMP, contact the Fort Richardson Troop Medical Clinic at 384-7514 or the EFMP medical chief at BACH at 361-5711.

MEDDAC-AK also operates the Fort Wainwright Community Mental Health Services and the Drug and Alcohol Counseling service. The indoor ice rink, located in the Physical Fitness Center, is operational mid-September to mid-May. There is also an outdoor rink at Youth Services.

Golf Courses

The Fort Richardson Moose Run Golf Course has two 18-hole courses, making Moose Run the "Northernmost 36-Hole Golf Course in the World."

The Creek Course was built with the most up-to-date construction techniques. This 7,324-yard, par-72, 18-hole course crosses Ship Creek several times, offering challenging golf and incredible views of the Chugach Mountains. The Creek Course has been ranked among the top 10 military golf courses worldwide, as well as being ranked number one in the state of Alaska.

Along with Moose Run's original 18, the 6,417-yard, par-72, Hill Course, the facility typically opens in mid-May and closes between late-September and mid-October. In addition to the playing courses, Moose Run offers a driving range, three practice putting greens, a chipping green and two short-iron hitting areas. The clubhouse has a large deck offering unrestricted views of Mount Susitna and the 18th hole of the Hill Course, a snack bar, fully stocked golf shop and rental clubs, carts and cars.

Fort Wainwright's Chena Bend Golf Course, the "Farthest North Military Course," is a 6,476-yard, par-72, 18-hole course. It is nestled between the east end of the Fort Wainwright airfield and the Chena River, with several holes running along the river.

The course, the only 18-hole golf course in the Fairbanks area, was rated by "Golf Digest" as Alaska's best for 1999. On select Sundays throughout the summer, there is a Par 3 course set up on the front nine for families. There is a self-serve driving range open 24 hours, a practice putting green and a chipping green with a sand bunker. There is also a practice area for those who have their own golf balls. Electric carts, pull carts and clubs are available for rent, and the clubhouse offers a snack bar and pro shop. The course is open May – September depending on weather conditions.

Fort Richardson

Fort Richardson hosts headquarters for both United States Army Alaska and United States Army Garrison Fort Richardson. While USAG Alaska focuses on installation support and providing a quality living environment, both are transforming units and facilities to support Army modularization. USARAK trains and equips forces to deploy rapidly in support of combat operations and other operations worldwide and commands forces as the land component of Joint Task Force-Alaska in support of homeland defense.

The Army in Alaska's strategic location, unsurpassed training capabilities, and partnership with Alaska communities make it a significant national asset and world-class power projection platform for military operations anywhere in the world.

Nearly 5,800 Soldiers serve at Fort Richardson, with more than 8,000 family members residing on post and in Anchorage, Eagle River and the Matanuska-Susitna Valley. The post employs more than 1,200 Department of Defense and contractor civilian employees.

The major combat unit at the post is the 4th Brigade Combat Team (Airborne), 25th Infantry Division. The brigade includes airborne infantry, artillery, engineer, medical, logistical, maintenance, military intelligence, signal and reconnaissance elements for deployment worldwide in defense of United States interests.

The 17th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion is one of the post's newest unit and includes engineer, maintenance and chemical elements as well as a parachute rigger company. Trained to work in any environment, the 17th has deployed Soldiers to Iraq, Afghanistan, Pompeii, Bangladesh, Japan, Korea, Philippines, Nepal, Kwajalein Atoll and various Alaska communities.

The post encompasses 62,000 acres including an airstrip, a helipoint, a drop zone suitable for airborne and air-land operations, and firing ranges. Soldiers stationed at the post learn the skills of arctic survival and master over-snow travel, tundra crossing, and glacier and riverine techniques along with their standard military specialties.

CHILKOOT TRAIL

The Chilkoot Trail, which spans 33 miles from Dyea, just north of Skagway, over Chilkoot Pass to Lake Bennett, British Columbia, was one of the established routes taken by prospectors to Yukon District goldfields during the Klondike gold rush of 1897-98. Thousands of stampedeers climbed the tortuous trail over Chilkoot Pass that winter.

The Continental Divide extends into Alaska. Unlike its portions in the lower 48, which divides the country into east-west watersheds, the Continental Divide in Alaska trends through the Brooks Range, separating watersheds that drain north into the Arctic Ocean and west and south into the Bering Sea.

There are an estimated 7,700-11,200 wolves in Alaska. Wolves have never been threatened or endangered in the state, and inhabit all of their traditional range except within the largest cities.

Alaska's heaviest owl, the Snowy Owl (Bubo scandiacasis), is 23" long and the only species in which the sexes can be easily distinguished. Females and young owls are heavily barred, while the adult male is almost completely white.

The moose (Alces alces) is the world's largest member of the deer family. The Alaska race (Alces alces gigas) is the largest of all the moose. Moose are generally associated with northern forests in North America, Europe, and Russia. In Europe they are called "elk." In Alaska, they occur in suitable habitat from the Stikine River in the Panhandle to the Colville River on the Arctic Slope. They are most abundant in recently burned areas that contain willow and birch shrubs, on timberline plateaus, and along the major rivers of Southcentral and Interior Alaska.

PERMANENT FUND

In 1976, Alaska voters approved a constitutional amendment to establish a dedicated fund: The Alaska Permanent Fund. The amendment provides that "At least 25 percent of all mineral lease rentals, royalties, royalty sales proceeds, federal mineral revenue-sharing payments and bonuses received by the state be placed in a permanent fund, the principal of which may only be used for income-producing investments." Fund income is generated from interest on bonds, stock dividends and from real estate rent payments, in addition to capital gains on the sales of these assets. The Legislature may appropriate the Fund's earnings.

The killer whale, (Orcinus orca), is the largest member of the group of marine mammals known as dolphins (family Delphinidae). They are called killer whales because they attack and consume whales or other large prey such as seals and sea lions. Adult killer whales generally grow to a length of approximately 27 feet (8.2 m). Females grow to an average length of about 23 feet (7 m). Adults may weigh as much as 10 tons. Killer whales are predominantly black in color with large white patches under the jaw and above and behind each eye.

Alaska is, in fact, a giant peninsula bordered by two oceans and three seas. The salt waters bordering Alaska are among the most productive in the world. Alaska typically produces about five times as much seafood as any other U.S. state and is ranked among the top 10 seafood producers in the world. Alaska has 6,640 miles of coastline, more than all the other U.S. states combined. If the distance around all the islands is added, the state has 43,000 miles of shoreline, which is 19,000 miles more than the distance around the entire earth at the Equator.
